

An Anthology of Mexican American Literature on Families "In Between Worlds"

Mexican American literature has a rich and vibrant history, with authors exploring the unique experiences of Mexican Americans living in the United States. One of the most important themes in this literature is the idea of "in-betweenness", the feeling of being caught between two cultures and identities. This theme is particularly evident in stories about families, as they navigate the challenges of raising children in a new country while maintaining their cultural heritage.

"The House on Mango Street" by Sandra Cisneros

Sandra Cisneros's semi-autobiographical novel "The House on Mango Street" is a classic of Mexican American literature. The novel follows Esperanza Cordero, a young girl growing up in a poor Mexican American neighborhood in Chicago. Esperanza's family is struggling to make ends meet, and she often feels like an outsider both in her own community and in the larger American culture. The novel explores the challenges of growing up in a poor and marginalized community, as well as the importance of family and community in overcoming these challenges.
