The master distillers at Whiskey Creek bring generations of expertise and an unwavering commitment to quality to every batch they craft. Their meticulous attention to detail is evident in every drop of Whiskey Creek 10, ensuring a whiskey of exceptional character.

Using only the finest ingredients, the distillers begin their process with carefully selected corn, rye, and barley. These grains are milled and mashed, unlocking the sweet flavors that will form the foundation of Whiskey Creek 10.

After fermentation, the whiskey is distilled twice in copper pot stills, a process that removes impurities and concentrates the flavors. The resulting spirit is then aged for a minimum of ten years in charred oak barrels, allowing the whiskey to develop its rich, complex character.
