

The Doodle Bug Song: A Deep Dive into the Sweetheart Songs Collection

The Doodle Bug Song was one of the most popular songs of the 1920s. It was written by Harry Ruby and Bert Kalmar, and it was first performed by Eddie Cantor in the Broadway musical "The Kid Boots" in 1923. The song quickly became a hit, and it was soon being recorded by a variety of artists, including Al Jolson, Paul Whiteman, and the Original Dixieland Jass Band.

The Doodle Bug Song is a novelty song, and its lyrics are full of nonsense and wordplay. The song's title refers to a doodlebug, which is a type of insect. However, the lyrics of the song do not actually have anything to do with doodlebugs. Instead, the song is about a man who is in love with a woman who is not interested in him. The man tries to win her over by singing her this song, but she is not impressed.

The Doodle Bug Song Lyrics

I'm gonna sing you a song About a doodle bug He's a funny little bug And he lives in the rug

(Chorus) Doodle bug, doodle bug He's a funny little bug He's got a funny little way Of ng the things he does

He crawls up on the wall And he hangs there by his toes He looks around the room And he winks his little nose

(Chorus) Doodle bug, doodle bug He's a funny little bug He's got a funny little way Of ng the things he does

He crawls up on the bed And he crawls all over me He tickles me so much That I have to laugh with glee

(Chorus) Doodle bug, doodle bug He's a funny little bug He's got a funny little way Of ng the things he does

I'm gonna sing you this song Until the cows come home About a doodle bug And the way he roams

(Chorus) Doodle bug, doodle bug He's a funny little bug He's got a funny little way Of ng the things he does
