Theodore Brun was born on October 15, 1909, in Stockholm, Sweden. From a young age, he exhibited an unquenchable thirst for knowledge and adventure. Drawn to the allure of the military, Brun joined the Swedish Royal Guards at the age of eighteen, honing his skills as a sharpshooter and developing a deep understanding of military strategy.

As the clouds of war gathered over Europe in the late 1930s, Brun's restless spirit sought a greater purpose. With the outbreak of World War II, he volunteered to fight against the encroaching Nazi menace, joining the Norwegian resistance movement in 1940.
